The tax assistance centers are one of the best sources of personal tax related help in California. There are times when certain complicated tax issues cannot be handled online or via telephone and people require a face-to-face interaction for assistance. IRS Taxpayer Assistance Centers helps people resolve all sorts of tax related problems. If you have a question regarding how the tax laws apply to your individual tax returns, then you can approach your local Taxpayer Assistance Center where you can display your tax related documents and discuss the issue with an IRS representative across the counter. IRS and other organizations across the world are committed to assist taxpayers. However, they also work towards achieving their own individual goals. They help to strengthen outreach efforts and bring education and assistance to millions. You need not take any prior appointment to discuss your problem and can just walk in to the center. But if you wish, you can call a local number and leave a message requesting to make an appointment to resolve a serious tax related problem. It is important to note that the telephone numbers of all the locations are not toll-free. When you make a call, you will reach a recorded business message that would enable you to gather information on the office hours, location and services provided by that particular office. There you may leave a message to request for an appointment or the rescheduling of an existing appointment. Within two working days, you would receive an appointment. Though many people prefer a face-to-face interaction, a telephonic assistance can also work in the same manner.
